A masterpiece

Ainsley art exhibit helps introduce Phase II at Kilgour Estate

A priority preview celebration at Kilgour Estate – Toronto's most successful condominium – showcased the launch of Phase II, as well as the luxurious lifestyle purchasers will enjoy. The Daniels Corporation pulled out all the stops, with sumptuous refreshments by Mark McEwan of North 44 Restaurants, live cello music in the lavish Gluckstein-designed model suite, plus the kick-off of a three-week exhibition of fine glass pieces from Sandra Ainsley Gallery.

The event also offered guests the chance to explore opportunities in the final phase of terrace condominium residences and Georgian-style townhomes at this prestigious north Toronto community located at Bayview and Lawrence Avenue. Phase I sold so quickly that it is already under construction – and Phase II has been launched much earlier than anticipated.

With condominium suites and townhomes in Phase II priced from the $300s, Daniels anticipates a response that is equally as enthusiastic as Phase I.

The Sandra Ainsley Gallery represents the works of major contemporary Canadian, American and internationally recognized artists working in glass and mixed media. Superb glass pieces on exhibit at Kilgour Estate by renowned artists such as Dale Chihuly, John Kuhn, Tom Scoon and Rick Beck range from perfume bottles priced from several hundred dollars to bowls and sculptures for several thousand – each as unique as the upscale neighbourhood, which is a residential work of art.

Daniels anticipates a response that is equally as enthusiastic as Phase I.

One of Ontario's foremost developers for the past 20 years, The Daniels Corporation is responsible for such landmark communities as NY Towers at Bayview and Sheppard Avenues and The Capital Condominiums at Mississauga's City Centre.
